

I am the hearing parent of a deaf child. In a nutshell, the captioning on live TV understandably has errors, some days more than others. The captioning on pre-recorded shows has too many errors that are unexcusable because they are reviewable prior to airing. Sometimes, the captioner paraphrases which loses meaning in the dialogue; other times, the words are screwed up or misspelled. On Frasier one time, Daphney was telling Don not to go. The caption stated "Don go" instead of "Don't go". Logically, the captioning company should review their work prior to its submission for airing. One NBC TV movie I think it was "Asteroid" was so totally screwed up there must have been another error because the whole movie was unintelligible. Thanks.
